NATO RADAR SCHOOL INAUGURATED

Ambassador Claire ~~Booth~~ Booth Luce attended the opening of the first course in advanced radar at a centre constructed near Rome. ~~With~~ Service students from six other countries, as well as Italy, took part. The United States supplied the equipment and Italians will manage the school. Armies navies and airforces of the Atlantic Powers on the Continent will come here to ~~lear~~ learn the practical side of the science which has revolutionised warfare. ~~Without~~ Without Radar, even in its early days, we might not have won the Battle of Britain. Without it now, neither attack nor defence would be possible. That America has provided the wonderful apparatus must have given considerable satisfaction to Mrs. Claire Luce.
