Top Secret at the Schoolboys' Exhibition. A Flying Saucer captured. Apart from Exhibition President Sir Harry Brittain and the Minister of Transport nobody over 16 was told about it. Only boys were allowed to probe this scientific miracle of the age and give it the works. To lively minds straight from the lab and classroom ~~mmmm~~ the ~~gun~~ saucer was their cup of tea. Then the models of Hawker ~~mmmm~~ Hunters. Something to make a youngster more air-minded than ever.

(1 planetaxi) The Army supplied field guns. A little imagination, and a boy could see his Latin master ~~right~~^{bang} in the sights. Glass ~~mmmm~~^{will} blowing! Worth learning in the hold, when any chap may break a window and then get blamed for it. As for the schoolroom designed by Punch artists, it's got everything. Including a desk to protect a boy from attack by teachers.

The Grub Desk has gravity-fed ginger beer, chestnut brazier and chewing gum park. Sir Harry Brittain said the ice-lolly was jolly ~~mmmm~~^D. What a pity Punch isn't the ^{or} Ministry of Education.
