

ALL EUROPE SHIVERS

They're certainly shivering in Kent. The garden of England stands open to the Arctic north-easters and will be very glad when the temperature rises. Its bad enough even for those clad in all wool. Richmond Park deer can't forage for themselves, so the 700 who live there are being fed with hay and a mixture of locust beans and maize. They quickly ~~learn to~~ ^{learn 2 spot} the supply tractor.

They evidently thrive on the diet. This was a ^{fine} scrap with no referee to give a silly verdict.

On the Rhine it's positively Polar. Ice breakers fight a losing battle trying to keep the fair way open. Near the Lorelei Rock the ice has piled up ⁱⁿ places ten feet high, 7 When the thaw does come they're expecting the worst flood ever remembered. So when we think we're cold we can be thankful we don't live on the other side of the channel.
