

ANY COMPLAINTS? ARMY COOKS COMPETE

Inside ~~the~~ Army Catering Corps Headquarters at Aldershot it looked like the kitchens of a high class hotel. But a test menu showed it was really an examination, the Army Cookery Finals. The competitors were winners in their districts and divisions, both in Britain and Germany. A mess tin full of greasy stew and unpeeled potatoes may have been all right years ago but even ~~in~~ under field-kitchen conditions, to keep the modern soldier happy they've banished the oldtime cook who couldn't boil water without burning it, ^{Now,} ~~and~~ as could be testified by ^{the} General Gale, Col. Commandant, Army Catering Corps, the modern cook house produces food as good as mother makes. In fact the judges of the competition enjoyed it all thoroughly.

78 Stand a good chance, don't we?

Team and individual prizes were presented by Lady Chilton, Sgt. Allebone, King's and Lancs, Brigade, is apparently the best cook in the army. ~~And now let's see if you apprentices,~~ ^{can} let's ^{be}

~~knock up a bully stew. // Left, right, left, right, left -~~