With the raised title of Khasa, who honours the Dalai Lama, as a background Lamas prepare to leave on a triumphal journey over the old roads which have been laboriously constructed across Tibet linking east and west over twisting mountain roads dominated by the towering sheer peaks.

Towns like Shigatsee which used to be eight days away in journey time can now be reached in two. And as the convoys of Lamas move over the new highway, and the jet streams across the sky, the natives of Shigatsee stream out to marvel at

It's a long way yet for them, from this to the semi-detached local or coming at the local or a parcel game on the table, but they'd better look out now that they've got an artificial civilization on its way.
