Crack shots of Britain and the Commonwealth competed at Bisley for that much coveted honour, the Queen's Prize. Defence Minister Sir Walter Moncton watched the marksmen, whose steady hands and good eye may be rewarded by £250, gold medal and gold badge. When the shooting was over the honour was won by the Basingstoke lawyer, Major G. E. Twine. He was repeating his win of two years ago. Legal worries haven't prevented him keeping his eye in during the interval. As always with the Queen's Prize winner Major Twine was chaired by fellow competitors.
