

CAMBRIDGESHIRE HORSES.

Our snooping cameraman at Nottingham went to get a few hints for the Cambridgeshire, and he found Fairplay entered for the 3.30. But the race was won by Lady of Shalott, and Fairplay could only achieve second place. Next he went to M. H.L. Cotterill's stables at Lambourn to see Dan Bulger. You will remember that Dan Bulger won the Cambridgeshire last year --- and this is how he did it. Here is Dan Bulger in training. He will undoubtedly try to repeat his 1936 success, but you ~~may~~ must never be surprised whatever might win this race. Never Surprised is the mount chosen by Gordon Richards, and you might get a pleasant surprise. Here is Never Surprised --- looking fighting fit in his stables at Kingsclere

DOG SHOW.

There were over 3,000 entries for the Olympia Show this year, and they represented most of the breeds of canine society that you know only too well. Fashions haven't changed much in the last few years but there is at least one breed that is new to you. It's a Pomeranian sheepdog, bred in Axminster where the carpets come from. And here are the toy dogs that used to roam the world about 50,000,000 years ago. These were the animals they hoped to find on the Lost World ~~in~~ in Grand Canyon, but they didn't materialise.

~~South Dakota Rapid City~~

So now they're going to hold an exhibition of models in Rapid City, South Dakota, but for a small flat

You can't beat a Pomeranian Sheepdog.
