

SINO-JAPANESE WAR.

401

Daily the news of the war in the Far East tells of the rising tide of slaughter. British soldiers guarding the British outposts there have been included in the latest lists of dead, and still warplanes and artillery maintain their unending bombardment. Our cameraman on the Shanghai battle front gambles his life by day and night in the advance positions. ~~On the outskirts of Shanghai the streets that lately gave passage to cars and rickshaws now offer transport only to guns. The shops and houses reverberate only to the roaring high-explosive and screaming metal.~~ A Japanese bomber appears in the distance --- he lets loose his devils' cargo, and the crash of impact rocks back the camera itself ~~and~~ as it records the awful scene.

WALES v SCOTLAND.

Men --- men --- men, and not a blonde in sight. ^{This was} ~~They were all~~
~~at~~ Cardiff, ^{where} ~~to see~~ Scotland ^{take} ~~take~~ the field first in the international against Wales. ~~The~~ out came Wales --- they won the toss, and Scotland kicked off. Scotland hustled into the attack in the opening stages of the game, but the first goal came from Wales, Bryn Jones scoring. Half-time came with no further score, and although Scotland got one in the second half Wales made their victory secure with another goal from Morris, to win 2 - 1. [^] Scotland had to fall back on their reserves
