

HURST PARK.

413

A fine day for winter racing --- and the early steeplechasing at Hurst Park becomes news because of the new 6/- stand with its commanding view of the course. . Twelve thoroughbreds went away for the Lonsdale Handicap Chase, ~~of just over three miles~~, Ostend taking the lead at the first fence. He showed the way to several Grand National names, then Belted Hero took over the front place. Three miles of almost faultless jumping, with the field keeping together like a crowd at a football match. To the real racing man, steeplechasing takes second place to the flat but for graceful action and thrills it's hard to beat. Battleship and Macaulay challenged near the finishing post, and Battleship went on to win by three-quarters of a length from Belted Hero.

TELEVISION.

With these pictures of the original television apparatus ~~and the dummy which which was first televised~~ --- now in the South Kensington Museum, we introduce ~~to you~~ Mr John Baird, the inventor.

The disastrous fire at the Crystal Palace destroyed much valuable apparatus, but despite that great strides have been made ~~in~~ 12 years. Television pictures have even been shown in air liners.

Another invention which has aroused almost as much interest this year, has been the iron lung. Freddie Snite, suffering from infantile paralysis, still lives through this invention. which breathes for him. Here he is playing chess.
