With the British gunboat Bee in the background, our cameras in China record the flight of terrified citizens of Nanking before the Japanese advance. By the hundreds they boarded the river refugee fleet. Nothing was left to them except life --- such is the plight of a defeated people. The ill-fated Panay was among the American ships that stood by. As the Japanese thrust inwards in their all-conquering march they are living off the land they ~~take~~ <sup>seize</sup> --- The harvest of the good earth and the livestock they take with them --- supplies for the invading army. And this is what happened to the American flag. Then into Shanghai march the soldiers of the Mikado on their victory parade --- arousing new friction with neutral powers. Unhappy Chinese watched the ~~passing~~ triumphant passing of the invader --- ~~the invader's~~ ~~maximized~~ Unemotionally British Tommies looked on as they guarded British property in the International Settlement. As the troops marched by a bomb was hurled ~~into the crowd~~ --- Japanese soldiers ran up with fixed bayonets and the Settlement Police, fearful of what reprisals might follow, forced back the crowd. Foreigners suffering the same treatment as Chinese, while Japan attempts to close the open door of the Far East.
