WEDDING.

The Brompton Oratory was the background of as charming a wedding as London has seen. Lady Patricia Douglas was the bride of Count John de Bendor and it was a field day for the cameramen. The bridegroom was formerly John de Forest, the well-known amateur golfer. Sixteen little people in Regency costume attended this daughter of Lord Queensberry and Lady Dunn, and charming though the bride undoubtedly was, the enthusiasm of the pages and maids of honour gave them a lot of the limelight. The show is over; bride and bridegroom left the forest of waving sticks that waved good wishes from the younger generation. Now for the wedding-breakfast; give me my cloak; do you think there'll be ices?
