FOORD v SCHMELING.

A clash of heavyweights at Hamburg --- Max Schmeling, former world champion, faced the South African Ben Foord. In the poor light, with the two looking so much alike, it is difficult to in indicate which is which, but it is generally Foord who is getting hit. Foord lost his British Empire titles to Tommy Farr, and in this fight he lost on points; but by standing up for twelve rounds against theman who is reckoned the be the world's best he sent up his own reputation sky-high. Max's right is always said to be dynamite, but though he plastered Foord he couldn't knock him out.

After the fight we called on Foord at his home in Surrey. Hey, Ben!
