

TROTting ON ICE.

A frozen river in Maine is the signal for revival of an old American custom. They bring out their trotting horses and race them at thirty miles an hour over the icy track. Hot footwork! But where there isn't any ice or snow --- that's ^{no} ~~not~~ excuse for not going ski-ing if you really want to. New York's East Side --- the poor kids underneath having just as much fun as the rich kids on top! Come on Steve!
