

FLOODS.

432

Our flying cameraman over the east coast secured these pictures from Horsey in Norfolk, where one of the worst floods for years has spread desolation over a wide area. Fields and farms were overwhelmed by the incoming sea, and the village was marooned.

Off Scarborough, the destroyer Walrus ran aground in foul weather. Stuck fast, she endured a continuous cannonade from pounding seas. Such a mishap is most unfortunate for those in command, but a source of great interest for those on shore. Go on, boy --- fetch it in.
