

PRINCE BERNHARD.

London --- Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands arriving on a private visit to England, called at the home of the Dutch Ambassador in Eaton Square. With the Prince was his brother Prince Aschwin. After a short stay at the Ambassador's home, Prince Bernhard left for Buckingham Palace to call upon King George.

FRENCH FLEET.

A big naval parade off Villefranche by the French Mediterranean Squadron, before leaving for those blue but controversial waters. Ten thousand ton cruisers took part in the review, as well as a large number of destroyers. ~~French destroyers are said to be the fastest in the world, with a speed of 45 knots.~~ Sun rays glinting upon a silvery sea make a pretty picture --- so let's have a smoke screen and spoil it.

WRESTLING.

A new kind of wrestling, just in case wrestling gets too dull. Eight ~~x~~ wrestlers blindfolded took the ring in a free-for-all lasting seven minutes. ~~They tell us that~~ <sup>a man</sup> ~~XXXXX~~ named King King was the winner; ~~but you, the great and fair-minded~~

but the

British public, will probably give the verdict to the pole.
