

R.A.F TRAINING SCHOOL

445

The Royal Air Force School of Technical Training at Halton is the largest school in the world, with 4,300 pupils. ~~In the model workshops air-minded young men are given instruction on the latest types of aircraft. The Air Force is the most technical of all three services, and aircraftmen must be highly trained and skilled mechanics. Here they are so efficient they get through seven years' apprenticeship in three years.~~ It's training up-to-date. Instructors not only tell the boys how things are done; they also tell them why they are done. And that's progress. For in the armies of yesterday nobody knew why things were done except the general, and he wouldn't tell anybody. Now --- to Florida. Uncle Sam is training young pilots for the air arm of the Navy. Now --- hold your hats --- it's bombers in a power dive.
