

KING FAROUK.

446

In the desert East of Suez the young King of Egypt took a keen interest in the manoeuvres of his artillery. / With His Majesty were the Prime Minister and members of the Cabinet.

And then the other big guns went off --- ~~Egypt's British-trained army went into action~~ --- an eastern nation displaying efficiency not surpassed in the western world. ^

Less fearsome but also military was the Grand Palace Horse Show in Paris, attended by President Lebrun. The day of the horse in the military scheme of things is nearly ended, but here is a swan song worthy of its great tradition. / That's why a horse show is always popular. Nobody would want to see a tank show when they could watch the charge of Algerian and Moroccan spahis. /

LoSp