POLICE BOXING.

Every title in the Police Boxing Championships at Harringay ~~was~~ went to Britain's policemen. It was the thirteenth annual open Meeting and fighting policemen came from France, Belgium, Holland and Germany to take those titles away; but the home-bred boys in blue swept the board. ~~We usually think of a British boxer as being a stately and slow-moving creature --- but on this night, ~~as they~~ they flashed and twinkled like shooting stars. Talking about stars --- they dealt out so many ~~big~~ punches that the opposition thought they were seeing ~~an assortment of~~ traffic lights. ~~But although the boxer was always ~~present~~, the training of the Force was never very far underneath, and they couldn't forget the old job. Pass along, please!~~~~

But

Yes, it was a great triumph. Light-weights, welters, middles, light-heavyies --- all produced a champion from ~~these~~ inside these islands.

The semi-finals of the heavies --- Porter from Colchester beat Mennegaut from Paris --- Robert beat the gendarme.

Then an all-British final --- Porter vers us Helton of Nottingham --- and again Porter was the winner, so the title went to Colchester. And Sir ~~Philip~~ Philip Game presented the Cup. But what is this? A boxing story from New South Wales --- half a dozen prospective champions in the ring and nobody 's not hitting nobody. This isn't boxing --- it's a traffic jam.
