AIR INVASION. ✓

The biggest mock war ever held in the air engaged many thousands of planes of the Royal Air Force. Bombers took off from Britain, flew over to France and returned in the imitation of a mass raid upon scores of cities and towns in England. The bombers were representing Eastland; defending were the fighters and anti-aircraft units of Westland. Hour after hour the darkening sky was filled with the drone of mighty engines.

Britain's power in the air has increased beyond our wildest hopes --- Wellingtons, Battles, Blenheims --- mighty battleships of the air now stand in countless thousands to man the new frontiers set up by science. But now, for the purpose of this rehearsal they are carrying out a mimic attack upon their own country.

They came over the coast in wave upon wave; and each wave was met with a wall of high-speed fighters --- dog-fighting among the clouds at three and four hundred miles an hour.

Britain's strength is greater now than ever before in its long history. And upon that strength we rest our hopes of a return to real peace.
