FIGHTER STATION.

At a moment's notice the pilots and planes of any Fighter Station in Britain are ready to take the air. In a matter of seconds the sky defenders of ~~Britain~~ the United Kingdom are away on what has now become a routine job --- shooting down Nazis. We must never forget what a debt of gratitude we owe to this branch of the Royal Air Force --- They have been destroying the enemy at the rate of four to one; imagine what would have been our plight to-day if those figures had been reversed.

A typical squadron under the Fighter Command returns home --- doing the Victory Roll. On landing, the pilots report their bag to the Intelligence Officer.

~~This station includes~~ Czech and Polish pilots ~~among its~~ also are attached

Their successes, under R.A.F. training and leadership, have been beyond praise.
