

BRITISH SOMALILAND VICTORY.

In August 1940, British Somaliland was evacuated by the British Army; ~~and~~ the Italian flag was run up the mast in Berbera its capital. When France collapsed it was found that this small outpost of our Empire could not be profitably held against the encircling enemy. And so once more G.B. News showed you that all-too familiar scene - the long, weary trek of innocent people swept out of their homes by the tide of aggression. To-day, after seven months of exile, those wanderers are returning: Berbera has been taken by another swift and masterly stroke in our campaign in Africa. ~~The~~ Navy, the Air Force and the Army in co-operation once again, have advanced another stage in the task of smashing Italy's African Empire ~~.~~
