

DEMOCRACY'S LEADERS IN AGREEMENT.

One of the historic meetings of ^{all time} ~~the world~~ was that of Britain's Prime Minister and America's President; while Mr. Roosevelt was theoretically holiday-making on his yacht Potomac, the two great leaders of democracy were in fact in conference on the ~~embattled~~ ^{points} Atlantic. ~~The points of agreement reached by these two great men of the twentieth century were not very startling: they merely underlined the ultimate aims of a reasonable civilization. The value of their meeting lies in the emphasis which it give to the single purpose of Britain and America in fighting Nazism.~~

~~but~~ No doubt they said a good deal more than they published:
~~but~~ and both have one chief aim in life --- to smash Hitler.
~~and~~ that's all that matters to us... we can leave it to them
