H.M.S. "Daring" leaves stricken Greek Islands--

Aug 25th. '53.

H.M.S. "Daring" ^{one of the} first British ships to have given such magnificent relief work to the devastated Ionian Islands-- sails for home.

~~Leaving behind her, the agony and heart-break of a stout Island~~ now, she passes through the Corinth Canal, en route for Piraeus- the Port of Athens.

Now, for the first time, since their long hours of toil, the crew can relax- while a new home is soon found for one small orphan of the disaster.

On arrival at Piraeus, there's a pleasant surprise awaiting Capt Gick- skipper of ^{the} H.M.S. "Daring"- and his gallant company. A welcome guest aboard is the Duchess of Kent (who is on a private visit to her mother- Princess Nicholas.) She is accompanied by her son and daughter, Prince Michael and Princess Alexandra.

After flying to ~~London~~ London, Captain Gick gives us first-hand information about the appalling upheaval, ^{AND SUBSEQUENT HARDSHIPS} (Sound to end)-
