Prisoners return to Liverpool--

Oct 20th. '53.

The long hours of waiting were almost over, as the troopship "Empire Pride" tied up at Liverpool Docks-- her decks lined with British Prisoners-of-War, from Korea, and servicemen from the Far East.

For relatives and friends, it was the end of long ~~days~~^{months} of anxiety, suspense and separation. But for returning husbands, sweethearts and fathers, it was all that-- and much more. /

It was the wonderful thrill that complete freedom brings-- knowing that their sufferings and injustices were over. And that, once again, the joy of family life was theirs-- in the land they were proud and thankful to call "Home". /
