

Helsinki: The 16th International Motor Races at Djurgarden. In the Open event, Britain's Rodney Nuckey, driving an Aston-Cooper, found Roger Laurent of Belgium, in a Ferrari, too fast for him. Watched by 74,000 fans the Belgian finished first; but was then penalised for a false start - leaving Nuckey the winner.

~~International Motor Races, too, in South West Germany, the motor-cycle races at Hockenheim. In the 1000cc event, New Zealander (Britain's world champion) Bruce Anson, secured his seat with such German teams. ... and first place in the 1000cc class, for the first time, to a British combination.~~

Now

... for the big motor-cycle event. Eighteen riders from six countries on a "round-the-houses" circuit.

And celebrating the clear roads, this one's really off on a big bend. But there was no street-corner loitering by the winner, Esko Lahti of Finland.

Over now to Lewiston, Idaho, where the rough-riders are coming to grief on America's toughest hill-climb.

The slope is called "Mark Means Hill" - but when they reach this mark - it means bruises. Over the top and happy landings!
