

Giraffe

London: Hey! Hey! What's the flap. Something new? Yes, ~~the giraffe~~ are ~~the baby llama~~ the baby Llama - one of the Zoo's newest arrivals.

There's a baby Zebra, too, - ~~it must surely be Spring in Regent's Park.~~ Regent's Park must be having a Spring here

But the long and short of it is - an eight-day old baby giraffe, and ~~these~~ these are the first pictures of proud Mother Maud with her infant, which has been named Chris - after the famous athlete Chris Chataway.

Cycle Race

Bavaria: On the seventh stage of the 1954 Tour d'Europe - a ~~spring cycling~~ <sup>cycling</sup> cavalcade leaves Augsberg on the 129 mile journey to Innsbruck, in the Austrian Tyrol.

Throughout the race - torrential rain hampered the riders and ~~many~~ many retired long before they crossed the border - into Austria.

Earlier - a group of ten (including three British riders) had slipped the field. And Dave Bedwell of Britain returned the same time as the stage winner - Maurice Diot of France.

Berlin Exhibition

Berlin: Before opening the British Pavilion, at the German Industrial Fair, the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Noel Bowater, inspected a Guard of Honour - mounted by Guardsmen. <sup>The Fair was a particularly</sup> welcome occasion for the Lord Mayor ~~as~~ ~~in that the British~~ theme of the British Section was centred on London.

In the nearby American Pavilion - the largest atomic exhibition outside the United States was on view. ~~But~~ "robot hands" which deal with radioactive components presented a glass of brandy to High Commissioner Dr. James Conant - who ~~opened the exhibition.~~ <sup>must have intended</sup>

how you say 'Good health to a robot.'
been tempted to say "Here's Uranium in your eye!"
