Latest pictures inside Peking and Moscow

13th Jan. 55

China: In post-war years, the Western World has anxiously watched the march of Communist China. ~~As a result,~~ little is known of life inside its ^{OF THIS NEW POWER} closely-guarded borders. ~~It is striking to find living standards for~~ ^{RARE AND} ~~the people are doing~~ Now come these ~~striking pictures~~ ^{STRIKING PICTURES} of Peking, the capital - a city that seems to ~~move on~~ ^{TODAY MOVE ON} of bicycle transport. ~~First impressions of the Communist~~ In Russian-style, huge portraits of the leaders adorn the city. ~~But these~~ ^{ARE THE} unmistakable signs of progress - the state shops look clean and modern. New stores are being erected - a state enterprise that seems to do without modern scaffolding.

Improved social services, too; the old hospital is replaced by a ~~modern~~ ^{DATE} modern building. ②

Outside the city, life has changed little - ~~but now~~ ^{BUT NOW} State Farms dot the patch-work countryside. Here, progress is slow. Like this old woman, the peasants are set in ~~habit~~ ^{BUT} habit; the young grow up in the new ~~Marxist~~ doctrine - and learn to farm the state-owned land with Russian equipment.

In similar manner, the camera goes behind the ^{SOVIET} Iron Curtain - to Moscow... And brings back pictures of famous buildings - the Museum in Red Square. ②

Here is the famous University ^{OF A} City ~~which~~ ^{which} existed some 800 years ago and grew around the walls of the Kremlin. On this very rare occasion, the camera ~~took~~ ^{takes} us inside the Kremlin ^{ITSELF} - once the home of the Tsar and his Nobles. Within ~~its~~ ^{its} walls ~~are beautiful palaces~~ ^{palaces & churches -} ~~churches and cathedrals~~ - and the ^{OFFICES OF THE SOVIET} Central Government, ~~offices~~ ^{offices}...
