

Belfast: A clash of champions with Sammy McCarthy (in striped trunks), the British Featherweight champion, and Billy Kelly, the Empire King-pin, staking their titles in a battle for supremacy.

And what a battle! McCarthy, the smiling Stepney boy, is wielding the finest left-hand in the business. But as round follows round, the Irish lad is slipping those classic lefts and counter-punching his way to the title ~~that~~ <sup>THAT</sup> his father, the famous "Spider Kelly" won in 1938.

And - at the final bell - the verdict goes to Billy Kelly, and the youngster really jumps for joy. A proud moment that's shared by a grand old champion.

Spider Kelly!

At Cardiff Arms Park, Wales kicked off in the postponed Rugby international with England - the 60th official meeting of the countries.

From a line-out, England (playing in white) try to break out - ~~following~~ ~~prolonged early pressure by the home forwards~~ but the attempt fails.

Then, after nine minutes - a penalty for Wales. And last-minute substitute Edwards - (an Army officer), hits the target.

Wales three points up; ~~but~~ <sup>x</sup> England are soon hitting back. A grand dash for the line but the final pass goes astray, and with it - their hopes for a first-half score.

After the interval - England made desperate efforts to save the game.

Wales defended stubbornly, to win by three points to nil.

So England surrendered their Triple Crown and Ken Jones collared the ball - a victory souvenir of his ~~22~~ <sup>36TH!</sup> record consecutive appearances for Wales.
