

Breaking new ground - Tottenham Hotspurs came out first at Bootham Crescent for their Fifth Round Battle with York City - the Cup ~~fixxxxx~~ Giantkillers of 1955.

In the tiny ground, all eyes were on the famous Spurs (in white shirts) as they kicked off - a team of rich tradition and talented football.

And for ten minutes, the London side looked the part - crowning clever mid-field ~~football~~ ^{play} with a George Robb goal.

But from then on, it was York City who played the winning football - a two-goal burst that changed the game. Here's the first - a great Wilkinson header.

~~xxxx~~ Before the visitors had recovered from the shock - York was pounding them again. And Fenton scores number two - both in a minute!

The second half - Spurs still playing their football and getting nowhere, it's York who had the password to Round Six - all-out attack..and another goal from Wilkinson.

York City three - Spurs one. A black day for London soccer and ^{to} ~~the~~ the gallant York team of part-timers - we award a bouquet of white roses.
