The Royal Wedding--

West End

April 22nd. '55.

Jordan-- A national holiday was proclaimed ~~for~~ for the wedding of King Hussein and Princess Dina of Egypt, and Amman the capital of Jordan was in festive mood.

In accordance with Moslem custom, the bride was not present at the ceremony. So her father, Prince Abdul Hamid, signed the register on her behalf, and the signatures were witnessed by King Feisal and Prince Abdullah of Iraq in the red and white Zahran Palace.

The wedding reception was held at the Raghadan Palace where the 19 year-old Monarch joined his lovely bride, who ~~was~~ was a glittering figure in a £2000 wedding dress specially made in Italy.

The new Queen was studying at Cambridge when she first met her future husband, while King Hussein, it will be remembered, was educated at Harrow and Sandhurst.

The honeymoon is being spent in Europe. A happy union, linking still further in friendship two ancient countries.
