

Nottingham: Before attending the Royal Agricultural Show, the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh toured one of the great centres of lace-making in the City.

And ^{Her Majesty} the Queen (whose love of needlecraft was fostered by her grandmother, the late Queen Mary) watched with rapt attention, every detail of the intricate operations

As you will notice - most of the workers have given long service to lace-making - and it is hoped that this skilled and delicate handicraft will ~~not~~ ^{never} be allowed to lapse - here in Britain.

The ~~Royal~~ highlight of the day was, of course, the visit to ^{WOLLATON} ~~Wollaton~~ Park for the great show. Here, the Queen and her husband (with their mutual love of horses) thoroughly enjoyed this parade.

Altogether, there were over three thousand eight hundred livestock entries with nineteen different breeds of cattle on show...

A day of ~~marked~~ Royal interest that ^{brings fresh encouragement to} ~~will prove a tremendous fillip for~~ agriculture in the heart of the Industrial Midlands.

British agriculture, more vital than ever to WOLLATON PARK. our national ~~etc.~~ prosperity.

Ireland.

*additional section for end,
omit "love in Britain"
and, ref. to The Queen.*