

Morocco: The flag-bedecked streets of Rabat, the Capital, ^{proclaim} ~~marked~~ a day of national rejoicing in the French Protectorate - for their Sultan was on his way home.

Over half-a-million loyal subjects surged round the plane which, with an escort of twelve jet fighters, brought the Sultan, ^{REN} ~~Ben~~ Youssef back to his country. After two years of exile in Madagascar, the Sultan had returned in triumph - hoping to bring stable conditions to Morocco...

With his two sons, the ^{Sovereign} ~~Sultan~~ drove in an open car, escorted by fifty motor-cycle police, while thousands of his subjects lined the route to the Palace...

Later, at a ceremony in the Throne Room, the Sultan ~~decorated~~ decorated the French Resident-General, M. Dubois. With the return of the Sultan - France hopes to lead the Protectorate ^{DESPIE MORE RECENT} ~~along an ordered path~~ to complete independence...

VIOLENCE, ALONG THE PATH