Moscow May Day-

May 4th, '56.

Moscow--- The traditional May Day Parade in Red Square-- ^{with} ~~brings~~ a difference. For this year, the accent is on pastoral festivities., rather than a show of ^{small} ~~might~~.

High overhead-- ^{just} a small formation of jet fighters-- down below- groups of children, carrying ~~flowers~~ ~~bunches~~ of flowers.

~~And~~ Many of the posies were for the popular leaders- including Marshal Bulganin and Mr Khrushchev (just back from their tour of Britain).

To-day- ~~the~~ the workers, collective farmers, and students hold the limelight, while the absence of pictures of Marshal Stalin suggest, perhaps, a new era in Soviet Russia.
