Duke in Suffolk

Suffolk: A memorable day for H.M.S. Ganges, (the Royal Naval Training Establishment) - a visit by the Duke of Edinburgh.

During his stay - the Duke was reminded of his own Dartmouth days, when the Juniors "Manned the mast?"

The two-day tour of East Suffolk continued with a tour of Lowestoft - our second largest herring port.

Besides visiting several trawlers, the Royal Visitor saw the Fish Market - the clearing-house last year for 25,000 tons of fish...

That means special guards to keep the cats away.

Lowestoft is also a centre of shipbuilding, and the Duke <sup>helped to</sup> ~~planned~~ ~~to~~ cast a commemorative plaque - ~~at~~ ~~the~~ ~~entrance~~ ~~to~~ ~~the~~ ~~harbour~~

At another yard, there were trawlers under construction, ~~the~~ ~~British~~ ~~Union~~ - and the "Boston Herald" - ~~with~~ the newest vessel in the harbour - received a Royal send-off on her maiden voyage.

Channel collision
