

Wedding

Westminster: The oil magnate, Mr Nubar ~~was~~ Gulbenkian, was an early arrival at St. Margaret's for his nephew's marriage.

The bride was Miss Geraldine Guinness - a cousin of the famous brewery family / and her groom ^{was} Mr Mikael Essayan - the only grandchild of the late ~~xxxxxxx~~ Calouste Gulbenkian, ~~the~~ Armenian, who left a three hundred million pound oil fortune. /

Costume jewelry

Havana harbour - a sparkling setting for a display of sophisticated costume jewelry - featured by models on board the luxury liner - "Homerick"

The fashion-note centres on matching sets - some with fabulous ear-rings up to five inches long.

Yes, Madam - jewelry will be worn this season - even if it knocks the sparkle off your husband's bank balance... /

London: Production Exhibition

London: At Olympia, the Minister of Labour, Mr Iain Macleod, congratulates young apprentices. ^{They have} built complete scale models of the automatic machines that boost output at the Austin works of the British Motor Corporation.

The models were on show at the Production Exhibition, and trace the complete manufacture and assembly of a car. /

~~Watching the fascinating exhibit was~~ Sir Leonard Lord, himself a former apprentice - and now ^{CHIEF} ~~Chairman and Managing Director~~ of the Corporation, ^{WATCHES THE FASCINATING EXHIBIT THAT} ~~is the world's largest exporter of motor vehicles.~~ ^{INCORPORATES AN AUTOMATIC CAR-SPRAYING PLANT} /

New Gates
London: ^{All} Anglo-American occasion, when the United States Ambassador, Mr Winthrop Aldrich opened the ^{of} 18th century wrought-iron gates -> ~~which were presented~~ the College of Arms, in Queen Victoria Street.

They were presented by an American donor - to mark the four hundredth birthday of the College.

The gates came from Goodrich Court, Hertfordshire, ^{AND WERE} ~~which was~~

^{ACCEPTED BY THE EARL MARSHAL} ~~demolished after the war...~~ /

^{AND GARTER KING OF ARMS.}