

Royal recognition for the Fleet Air Arm as the Queen inspects the Parade, at Lee-on-Solent, before presenting her Colour to the Barracks, the Headquarters of Britain's Naval Airmen.

An unrehearsed moment as the high wind sends the big drum rolling into the line of Wrens...

Finally, the drum was safely anchored, and the Colour presented - to ~~mark the achievements in the two World Wars~~ mark <sup>notable</sup> service in two World Wars. (2)

~~mark the achievements in the two World Wars~~

Then, joined by the New Colour - the Parade marches past the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh. (2)

And to celebrate this mile-stone in Fleet Air Arm history - there was a fly-past of Naval Aircraft. From the helicopter, with its proud record of air-sea rescue - to the latest jet fighter - the striking-power of a modern Navy.
