Loss of the "Noyana"

Channel storm.

31st July 1956

A few weeks ago, the "tall ships" sailed gracefully into the news when they competed in the Sail Training Race, to Lisbon. Among them was the British ketch, "Moyana" - and for her fifteen Cadets, their first sea trip was crowned by success in the great international contest. Then, where returning in triumph to Britain, the "Moyana" from the sea

Following her S.S.S. messages, the Moyana was first sighted by an R.A.F. Shackleton of Coastal Command. After directing rescue vessels to the spot, the Emerimizan air crew filmed these dramatic rescue par pictures as the Moyana's crew were taken aboard the British ship "Clan Maclean".

The ketch was taken in tow but later sank - a sad moment for her young crew - where first great all the solar transfer the sola
