

Arriving at St. Margaret's, Westminster, for a fashionable Autumn wedding, charming young ^{ATTENDANTS} bridesmaids caught every eye - ~~and~~ ^{AND} most of London's smart set were among the guests. (3)

~~The five bridesmaids in pink organza dresses~~ ^{IT WAS A} bleak November day - but one youngster obviously ^{THOUGHT} prevention was better than a chill.

^{ENJOYING} break from the busy round of duty, Princess Margaret attended this wedding of close friends - the Hon. Peter Ward, son of the Earl of Dudley, and his lovely bride, Claire Baring.

The Bride, ^{- NAMED AS ONE OF LONDON'S TOP-TEN BEAUTIES -} ~~in 1945~~ debutante, wore a gown of white slipper satin, with a diamond and pearl tiara. ~~and was named one of London's top ten beauties~~ ^{THE} FIVE LITTLE BRIDESMAIDS WORE PINK ORGANZA DRESSES. And compensating for this wintry wedding - the honeymoon will be spent in the sunny West Indies.

Another engagement in the Royal Diary took Princess Margaret to the University College of North Staffordshire, ^{at} Keele.

There, in a Presidential Address, (before installing the new Principal of the College) Her Royal Highness spoke of the need for faith in our troubled world. / SOUND.

Then, the Princess (who was elected President last June) conferred the Principal's Cap upon Sir George Barnes, former Head of the B.B.C. Television Service. /

Another Royal visit was made to a long-established centre of shipping and commerce, when the Queen arrived at the Baltic Exchange, and received a bouquet from 7 year-old Wendy Bonnie.

Her Majesty (who had come to open a new extension), spoke of the trusted role the Exchange played in the shipping of such commodities as Coal, grain and timber.

Then, opening a door into the new wing, the Queen, ~~(who was the Center of the Exchange)~~ passed into the Banquet Hall. (2) And the Chairman, Mr Tadman, explained the principle of a steel-framed wall, which can be electrically-raised to form two rooms. The foundation stone ~~of the Exchange~~ ^{HAD BEEN} laid by Sir Winston Churchill - who, with the Duke of Edinburgh, is an honorary member...
