

Returning to Sandhurst (where he was a Cadet over forty years ~~ago~~ ago) was Field Marshal Sir Gerald Templer, Chief of the Imperial General Staff. He was invited to inspect the Sovereign's Parade by the Adjutant of the College, Major J.W. Scott.

This year, ~~big~~ fog partly obscured the colourful ceremonial. But it couldn't mar the occasion for ~~over~~ over two hundred of the 760 Cadets - who were "passing-out" after fifteen tough months, at Sandhurst. By tradition, the Senior Officer-Cadets led the march-past - parading for the last time at Sandhurst - before receiving their commission as Army Officers.

During the ceremony, the Field Marshal presented the Sword of Honour to Senior Under-Officer C.G. Cornock, of Nether Wallop, Hampshire, the best Officer-Cadet of the term...
