

2406

London: Ever since Man furnished his first cave and dragged home a mate he has been changing his style of furniture. First, it was stone, then trees, and now, man-made timber - on show at the Furniture Exhibition.. Yes, we've come a long way since they wrote on the cave walls.

But to-day, comfort often takes a back seat to artistic style. And it seems that, even to ~~sell~~ ^{SELL} furniture - you must have a "gimmick". Here, the centre leaf finally takes the table-cloth. Anyway, it's welcome drawer-space in a modern flat. (2)

And here's a handy answer to that old problem.

~~The average person spends about one-third of his life in bed - as Roland Matt's description of "Flash-a-bed" (a late 20th century dream bed) is bound to win much business.~~

And seeing that Touring exhibitions is always an exhausting business ^{TO TEST THE BEDS - PROVING} ~~AND~~ our weary cameraman accepted an invitation ^{that he had to prove} that comfort has the last word!