for British industry, too, when Prince Philip visited a factory, in Surrey, specialising in the production of secret Radar equipment.

Besides supplying technical aids to the Navy and Air Force, the company processes gramophone records on a large scale.

During his tour, the Duke stopped to watch Paddy Dooley at work; his daily full with a cocupation is the smashing of rejected records.

A visit full of interest for the Duke - for (through his Naval service) he is well-versed on the practical application of Radar...
Finally, it was time to go - with a cheery smile for the workers - who voted it a smashing well.

FOR PADDY DOOLEY, EVERY DAY IS A SMASHING DAY.
