

Into London Airport, the warm adieux of France speeding them across the Channel - the Queen and Prince Philip came home. The wonderful four-day State Visit to Paris was now...a Royal Memory.

Memories to be treasured. The Queen glances at her wrist watch - a generous gift from the Paris Chamber of Commerce

Money of Aumour -... the little girl who forgot Royal etiquette - AND TURNED HER BACK ON THE QUEEN

THEXE

That brilliant reception at the Louvre

Another happy occasion-with the British Community - laying the foundation stone of the new Scottish church.

the loyal cries of "welcome home" - as the happy pair left London tireraft Airport - for the drive to Windsor Castle.

An unrehearsed incident and Winfor that delayed the

THE PASSING TRAIN RECOLLS ANOTHER HEACH an underground train.

Paris City Council's gift for Prince Charles an underground train.

tax For Princess Anne - that equivale set of Parisian mass.

Driving on - through the lovely countryside to their Windsor home - a lazy sweep of the River Thames conjurs up visions of entrancing ornamental waters, in the grounds, of Versailles (had down)

Therefore her visit to the Palace, the Queen attended a luncheon, held in the famous Hall of Mirrors - where the peace treaty of 1919 was exquisite

Even to-day, the squisite chambers of the Palace extol the ghories of its Royal past - when Marie Antoinette and Louis the Sixteenth entertained the most noble families in the land.

Royal Memories (Sheet Two)

So the travellers arrived home - to another ancient seat of Royal lineage - where stern eastle walls tower above the rural setting of the Thames...

At night, twinkling lights on the river will fill Her Majesty with enchanting memories of that floodlit pageant on the River Seine...

the Queen (wearing a shimmering, diamond-embroidered gown of silver lace, with broad bands of fox fur) was a radiant figure that made even Paris gasp with admiration.

Amid resounding cheers, the yacht moved upstream on a journey that was revived to the Royal Visitors past chapters of French history...

For the river banks, historic tableaux, massed choirs and bands waited - as the cruise continued "under the bridges of Parist"

In front of the Palace of the Legion of Honour stood Imperial Grenadiers the famed soldiers of Napoleon.

A glimpse now of a golden age - when strolling players appeared, by command, at the Royal Court. ... while, on every bridge that straddled the gleaming waters - Parisians kindled a welcoming glow for the xmax Queen who had won all their hearts.

So the fairytate journey went on - past tableaux depicting the age-old

The beautiful Cathedral of Notre Dame

Here, with characters in folk costume, the Provinces of France paid their homage...framed by curtains of coloured water - the offering of river fire-floats...

For eighty minutes, the Queen and the Duke had sailed through the pages of French history. As Royal Ambassadors they have brought new meaning to the Entente Cordiale commission in peace - A friendship strengthened in two world wars.