

In a quiet London square, British and French paratroopers paid homage to war-time Resistance heroes. A tribute shared by Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother and the new French Premier, Mr Bourges-Maunoury, himself a resistance leader.

Outside No. 1 Dorset Square, [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Her Majesty spoke of the brave patriots, who had passed that way... [REDACTED] (SOUND - QUEEN MOTHER)

Then, the unveiling of a commemorative plaque to honour a brave company whose deeds (at the risk of torture and death) saved countless Allied lives. These war-time pictures recall the liberation of Paris - when the underground patriots struck their finest blow for Freedom..

[REDACTED] After meeting some of those very Resistance HEROES OUTSIDE THE LONDON HOUSE WHERE THEIR ACTIVITIES WERE PLANNED, ~~here~~ the Queen Mother was presented with a commemorative brooch by the French Premier....and received a presentation book telling the courageous story of French Resistance.