Big Brother's sports day was an exciting occasion for Princess Anne - arriving with the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh at a Chelsea playing field.

Family introductions opened the occasion - with Prince Charles proudly presenting his many school friends.

The young athletes' first test came in the school cricket match - and proving himself a keen fielder, the young Prince shares his father's love for the game.

A turn behind the stumps now - taken with all the irrepressible eagerness of a Godfrey Evans.

Charles the batsman. Father will obviously have to give him a lesson on the merits of keeping a straight bat.

~~Charles the batsman. Father will obviously have to give him a lesson on the merits of keeping a straight bat.~~ A boundary. Scampering down the pitch - the young batsman runs all four...and even ran out one of his chums...

But the highlight was the Navy-style field-gun display - included at the wish of Prince Charles, who was thrilled by this event at the Royal Tournament.

With Charles as leader, ten boys hauled a model eighteen-pounder across an imaginary river. The Prince leads the way in real "commando" style. There was a loud cheer for squad-leader Charles and his team when they took five minutes for the operation - knocking two minutes off rehearsal time.

Then the Royal sportsman showed that he was equally at home on the athletic field - ready to surmount all obstacles.

In the relay - the young sprinter spurred on his team and shared a well-earned victory.

Amid encouragement from the Queen and Princess Anne - the Duke of Cornwall (running fourth in the Sprint) tried so hard to overhaul those leaders.

~~Charles the first sports day was over and~~ ^{Finally -} a tired but happy schoolboy joined his family - the end of a perfect sports day!
