A day on the farm: but in the young world of make-believe, it ~~is~~ <sup>might be</sup> ~~obviously~~ round-up time on the ranch. Once you've roped your calf - just dig your heels in - and you're home on the range. If you had a calf and it wouldn't go.. Try a little gentle persuasion. If that doesn't work - ~~ask~~ ask Father. ~~with~~ ~~the~~ ~~great~~

Meanwhile, Princess Anne decides on the feminine approach

But even a Royal Command falls on deaf ears - ~~down on the farm~~ <sup>A</sup> ~~then another~~ family stroll to another farm ~~on the Estate~~

The Queen is accompanied by the Earl of Caithness - the Proctor of Balmoral Estate.

Here, the Royal Children decide to make friends with bigger game - an Angus Bull.

~~But that is not all - they also~~ ~~go~~ ~~to~~ ~~the~~ ~~Queen's~~ ~~ob~~

Yes, holiday time is quickly passing at Balmoral - for soon Royal Duty will make its call when the Queen and the Duke leave on their North American tour. But during those days of parting - the family will be united by ~~these~~ happy holiday memories.
