

Britain's Ryder Cup Victory8th October 1957

At Lindrick, the victory march was on! The golfers of the British Isles were hitting back hard, in a sensational Ryder Cup recovery.

American masters (like Don Finsterwald) were losing their famed accuracy on the greens.

Despite that three-one defeat in the foursomes, Ireland's Christy O'Connor

~~scored~~
SCORED

a resounding victory.

A tough Ryder Cup baptism for young Peter Mills. Meeting the U.S.

captain, ~~Jackie Burke, Mills~~ JACKIE BURKE, MILLS triumphed in great style.

~~American Tommy Bolt~~

The heat was on! America's Tommy Bolt blew up long before the final green - where he smashed his club.

U.S. golfing supremacy was shattered. Bolt's opponent, (Eric Brown of Scotland) proved another British winner. Four and three... 5

Playing a real captain's innings, Dai Rees inspired his team with some great golf against Ed. Furgol.

And what a reception he received on the 12th green - when he finally polished off the crack American, Seven and six... 6

A sporting Ed Furgol congratulates the Welsh Wizard - whose leadership had achieved almost a sporting miracle.

Tremendous scenes greeted the final round. The British Isles had won six of the eight singles, with one halved. The victory score-card read...

Great Britain $7\frac{1}{2}$ - America $4\frac{1}{2}$.

A team of fighters had inflicted the heaviest Ryder Cup defeat on America's golfing "Masters" - to regain the coveted trophy after twenty-four years.