Into Renfrew Airport came a Heron of the Queen's Flight: the Royal Visitor was Princess Margaret and the Vice-Lieutenant of Renfrewshire led a warm Scottish welcome.

The Lord Provost, Mr Galpern was ^{To} ~~to~~ be the Princess's guide... His wife presented a bouquet ~~of pink carnations.~~

Her Royal Highness was ~~making a ceremonial visit to be opened~~ to open the £600,000 ~~extension~~ water works, ^{EXTENSION -} at Glen Finglas.

The original Loch Katrine water scheme was ~~inaugurated~~ inaugurated by Queen Victoria, nearly 59 years ago. And now, in opening the extension, the Princess turned the same handle that her Great-Great Grandmother had used, so many years ago.

The water began to pour through the newly-constructed tunnel ~~at the site.~~ The new extension will supply over ~~100x~~ one-hundred million gallons to the city every day: ~~over~~ five times the output of Loch Katrine, 100 years ago.

Before leaving the site, Princess Margaret looked at the cairn that will commemorate the Royal Inauguration of the Glen Finglas scheme... So the water supply of the City of Glasgow has been augmented to meet the ever-growing demand and in the words of Princess Margaret "It had been a memorable day!"
