CUNNINGHAM'S FAREWELL.

Ceremony of farewell to Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Cunningham at Allied Headquarters, Algiers. General Eisenhower arranged it personally. Guards of Honor were drawn up outside the building. British and American detachments participating in this friendly gesture to Sir Andrew who was giving up the Mediterranean Command to become First Sea Lord.

There was a typical Eisenhower ring about this kindly thought which came as a complete surprise. A compliment to a great man and personal friend.

DE GAULLE IN CORSICA.

Corsicans turn out in force to welcome General de Gaulle. Travelling through Ajaccio the Capital he meets with a big reception. The rapid exit of the Germans from the Island, was in no small measure due to the splendidly organized resistance movement of the population. Well armed patriots who shared in the Nazi eviction, are among those who proudly tell General de Gaulle how they assisted the liberating French forces which came to eject the Germans. Travelling in an open car with the Mayor, General de Gaulle receives the cheers of the now happy Islanders.

Wreaths are laid at the War Memorial and at the foot of the monument to the Emperor Napoleon who was born here. Corsica in Allied hands represents a powerfully situated base for the approach on Northern Italy.
