JAPS ATTACK U.S.CARRIER.

Another of those big days among the Islands which give the lie to the word "Pacific". Jap Zeros versus an American Carrier, and the Nips are falling out of the sky like Autumn leaves.

In this flurry of shells, bullets and bursting flak stands the cameraman. He's rewarded with some of the finest action shots of the war. Even the Editor thought them good.

A perfect close-up of another ZERO bursting into flames, shedding a wing section and going lickety-split into the sea.

Another notch in MacArthur's gun.
