DOUBLE WEDDING.

The splicers spliced. L.A.G.W's Henderson and Hobbs stationed at a London Balloon site became the brides of engineers SIBELIN and HAY. A blitz-time romance culminating in a double wedding. For the ceremony the brides make use of the wedding dresses made available to Service girls by the War Office.

At All Saint's Church, Tooting Bee, the couples who sealed their engagement beneath the shade of a barrage balloon, are married. The WAAFS and the engineers are man and wife.

Leave was not easy to come by when they got married, so they march in procession onto the balloon site and held the reception under the affluent spread of "Winnie" the gas bag. They say that love laughs at locksmiths. This day cupid must have doubled-up.
